I would not feel good about myself if I did not make clear that I have come to know and admire James Comey as a man of integrity and a hero – i.e., he is a man who will sacrifice his own well-being for the greater purpose. He is a man of high principles operating in a low-principles environment. Heroes typically get crucified or martyred in the end. Jim knew that when he took the job, but like good soldiers called to battle, felt the responsibility to serve. He deserves our thanks rather than scorn.

I think he is genuinely open minded on vast majority of things, but not stuff that could really challenge liberalism.

He's always had a blindspot on some stuff where he just won't consider arguments/evidence from other side b/c thinking that way is "bad."

He's always been shitty about certain issues, but he's clearly getting worse lately. He's reacting hysterically to rise of nationalism, etc.

I'm an American and I don't value my life. So fuck you, Eggman.

Evan McMullin @EvanMcMullin · Apr 20, 2017
If you're an American, I risked my life for you while at CIA. And, I'd do it again.

Also like Venezuela, you can win all the elections you want and the judiciary makes it meaningless.

Unfortunately for us, like in Venezuela, the military is on the side of the regime. No right-wing coups for us.

It turns out that if you elect a GOP House, GOP Senate, & GOP POTUS, the GOP is incapable of doing anything at all. Really makes you think.
